

Slavery and Anti-Slavery in the Modern World

Did the abolition of the slave trade in 1807 really mark the beginning of the end of slavery in the modern world?

The University of York is bringing to the City a series of distinguished speakers to talk about the meaning and legacy of 1807 and the persistence of human bondage and forced labour in the modern world. All are welcome to these lectures which are guaranteed to stimulate comment and controversy.

Entrance by admission ticket. Available on the door (£5.00), or in advance (£4.00 each lecture, or £12 season ticket for all four lectures). Concessions for unwaged.

Tickets and further details from: Abolitions, 1807-2007 Bookings, c/o Department of History, University of York, Heslington, York, YO10 5DD, or via www.york.ac.uk/conferences/abolitions2007/
e-mail: cecs500@york.ac.uk
01904 432974 (voicemail)

City of York lectures 2007

The Right Reverend Dr Alastair Redfern, Bishop of Derby

White Slavery: Josephine Butler and prostitution in Victorian England

3 May - Tempest Anderson Hall, York Museum Gardens

Aidan McQuade (Director, Anti-Slavery International)

Unfinished business: slavery in the 21st century

6 June - St Williams College, College Street

The Right Hon. Clare Short MP

Slavery and its aftermath

20 September - Tempest Anderson Hall, York Museum Gardens

Trevor Phillips (Commission for Equality and Human Rights)

Abolition of the slave trade: atonement for the past, providing for the future

4 December - Tempest Anderson Hall, York Museum Gardens

All lectures commence at 6.30pm

THE UNIVERSITY of York